

A hand holding a broken heart against a bright sun. The heart is split down the middle, and the sun is shining through the gap, creating a bright, glowing effect. The background is a soft, warm, golden light, suggesting a sunrise or sunset. The overall mood is one of hope and healing.

Written on Your Heart

(by Rev. Drew Phillips)

You are seen, you are heard, and you are known. The care you have provided and continue to provide is seen and appreciated. The daily sacrifice and commitment to those in need does not go unnoticed. May you feel comforted as you are looked upon with love by the One who loves perfectly.

The cry of your heart is heard. As you have grieved the many losses and pains of this pandemic, know the voice of your heart has been heard. Every tear shed for yourself, or for the family who has lost someone dear, has been captured and bottled up. Its meaning has been heard and discerned by the One who gives grace and hears our cries even when they make no sound.

Your burden is known. As you have carried the mounting weight of this past year, you have seen, heard, and known. May you begin to shed the constant weight you have carried, not forgetting all that has happened, but moving through the other side so that you may honor those who have deeply touched your heart.
